LONDON, October 6.
Yesterday several persons of distinction arrived in town from Holland. Great numbers of families were on the eve of embarking for this country as an asylum.

Mr. Hailes, the British minister at Copenhagen, is, it is said, coming home.

The defeat of general Clairfay's army on the Rhafe, appears to have been of the most decided nature; and will, it is much to be feared, oblige the combined forces to leave the whole country on this side of the Rhine exposed to the enemy, who according to the advices brought by the last mail, have already taken Havelo, Malmeda, Spa and Aix la-Chapelle.

General Clairfay is now at Cologne, against which the enemy are said to be advancing in great force, on the near approach of whom it is thought he will pass the Rhine, no judging it prudent to risk another engagement in the present reduced state of the army, with such an immense superiority of force as is opposed to him.

By a gentleman who arrived in this city last evening from London, which he left on the 26th of September, we learn that the French had defeated the British and Hanoverians under the duke of York, who was obliged to cross the Meuse with the loss of 2000 men; that the French have taken Valenciennes, Conde and Sloys; the conquest of Breda and Gertrudenburg was momentarily expected; that a fleet of twenty six sail of the Line was lying at freshet for sea—and that with respect to the negotiations of Mr. Jay, it was confidently said in London that the British had agreed to give up their posts on the frontiers of the United States.

IN SENATE,

December 12, 1794.

Resolved, that the consideration of the bill entitled "An act concerning occupying claimants of land who may be legally evicted from the same," be postponed until the next session of assembly, and that the public Printer be requested to publish the same in the Kentucky Gazette, and the Clerk shall furnish the Printer with a copy for that purpose. Extract &c.

Attest B. Thruston, C.S.
An Act concerning occupying claimants of land, who may be legally evicted from the same.

WHEREAS from the frequency of interfering claims to lands and the unsettled state of the country it often happens that titles lay for a long time dormant, and many persons deriving a fair title from the record settle themselves on land supposing it to be their own from which they may be afterwards be evicted by a title paramount, which greatly obstructs the cultivation and population of our country and may eventually ruin many innocent people; for remedy whereof,

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, that all and every person who shall have settled or may hereafter settle on any land for which he can show a plain and connected title in law or equity deduced from the record of some public office without actual notice of an adverse title in like manner derived from record and who shall afterwards be legally evicted from the same, shall be exempt and freed from all and every species of action, suit or prosecution for or on account of any trespass, rents and profits or damages which shall have been done, accrued or incurred at any time prior to the receipt of actual notice of the adverse claim by which the eviction may be effected.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, that the court who shall pronounce and give the judgment of eviction either in equity or at law shall at the time nominate seven fit persons of the neighbourhood where the land lies, any five of whom shall have power, and it shall be their duty to go on the premises and after viewing the same assess the value of all such valuable and lasting improvements which shall have been made thereon before the receipt of such notice as aforesaid, which assessment signed and sealed by the persons making the same shall be by them lodged with the clerk of the court where in they were nominated before the next ensuing term, at which time it shall be entered up as a judgment in favor of the person evicted and against the successful claimant of the land, nor shall the possession of the land be changed from the one to the other until the amount of such judgment be paid, or sufficient bond and security to be judged of by the court and taken by the clerk at the time of entering up such judgment, be given to pay the same within twelve months from the date thereof, provided that the balance shall be ultimately in favor of such occupying claimant according to the provisions and directions of this act.

Sec. 3. And to declare what shall be the law between adverse claimants under distinct titles of the kinds aforesaid, after notice, Be it further enacted, that the persons nominated by the court as aforesaid, when making an assessment shall carefully distinguish between such improvements as were made on the land prior to notice, and those which were made after notice; and when making an assessment they shall also take into their consideration all such necessary and lasting improvements as shall have been made on the land after the receipt of such notice as aforesaid, and shall ascertain the amount of the value thereof; and they shall also take into consideration and ascertain the amount of the value of the rents and profits arising from the whole of the improvements on the land, from the time that notice of such adverse claim was received by the occupying claimant; and then after taking the amount of the one from the other, the balance shall be added to or subtracted from the amount of the value of the improvement which shall have been made before the receipt of the notice aforesaid as the nature of the case shall require.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, that the persons nominated by the court in virtue of this act shall be called Commissioners and shall respectively take an oath or affirmation to do equal right to the parties in the controversy; and shall also have power and authority to call witnesses; to administer the necessary oaths and to examine them for the ascertainment of any fact material in the enquiry and assentment by this act directed.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, that the said Commissioners in making every estimate of value by virtue of this act shall state separately the result of each, and any party thinking himself or herself aggrieved by the report of the said Commissioners, shall upon the return thereof to the court state his exceptions thereto in writing, which shall be considered by the court and allowed or overruled as shall seem lawful and right, and if such exception shall be allowed the court shall proceed to nominate other Commissioners or the same; whose duty it shall be to perform the service required by this act, and the court shall have power to make such allowance to the said Commissioners in any case as shall seem just, which allowance shall be taxed and collected as costs; and the said Commissioners shall state in their report to be made as aforesaid the time at which notice in either case shall have been received and by what means; provided, and be it further enacted, that this act shall not be extended to effect any suit already commenced for trespass on lands, and for rents and profits arising from lands nor shall it be construed to affect any contract between the seller and buyer of lands, or rights of land acquired after the passage of this act by purchase from the Commonwealth.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, that notice of any adverse claim or title to the land within the meaning of this act, shall have been given by bringing a suit either in law or equity for the same, or else by delivering a copy of the entry and survey on which such adverse claim is founded to the party in possession, or leaving the same with some free person at his or her place of abode on the land in all cases which shall relate to any who shall settle on land after the passage of this act. But in cases affecting parties who shall have settled before the passage of this act, any actual notice proved to have been received by the party in possession of an adverse claim shall be deemed sufficient.

Sec. 7. And that no doubt may arise about the kind of improvements which shall be valued by virtue of this act, Be it further enacted, that valuable, necessary and lasting improvements within the meaning of this act, shall be lands cleared and inclosed, orchards, dwelling houses, necessary out houses and barns and no others; and those to be valued according to their kind materials and other circumstances, provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, that in no case shall the proprietor of the better title be obliged to pay to the evicted occupant for improvements made after notice, more than one half the value of the land recovered, which shall also be viewed and assessed by the Commissioners aforesaid, exclusive of the improvements, and certified to the court in manner and form aforesaid. And if any proprietor of the better title shall choose to relinquish his better title to the party in possession, he shall do upon record, in the court where the proceedings shall have been had in the suit: whereupon the entry of the estimated value of the said land, shall have the force of a judgment, upon which any legal execution may issue after three months to be computed from the date of such relinquishment and judgment, provided that upon sufficient equity and bill filed an injunction may issue to stay such execution until the matter of equity can be heard.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, that notice to any occupying claimant shall bind all those claiming from by or through such occupying claimant to the extent of such claim: And if it shall appear to the Commissioners aforesaid that waste has been committed on the land by the unnecessary destruction of timber, or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the said Commissioners to state and report such waste to the court, who shall thereupon cause an issue to be made up and direct a writ of Enquiry, and impanel a jury to try the issue or assess the damage, as the case may be, for such waste: Who shall return a verdict accordingly, the amount of which verdict shall be placed to the credit of the proprietor of the better title. And if upon finally adjusting all matters within the provisions of this act, between the evicted occupant and the successful claimant, the balance shall appear to be in favor of the latter, judgment shall be entered for such balance, upon which the party in whose favor it is shall have execution after three months from the date of said judgment.

This act shall commence and be in force from and after the passage thereof.
